Reflecting on Our Journey – Introduction to Jitoleze 2024 Annual Report

Dear friends & sponsors,

As we present Jitoleze Foundation 2024 Annual Report, I am filled with immense pride and gratitude for the transformative journey we have undertaken together. The year 2024 marked a pivotal shift in our approach—a year of transformation, a year of bold strategy, collaboration, and tangible impact. Today, as we look back on the foundation's projects and the progress made, we reaffirm our commitment to building peaceful and sustainable communities.

Our first-ever five-year strategy, co-created with partners, staff, and volunteers, redefined how we address systemic challenges—from climate action to empowering Women, and Youth including those with disabilities living in Busia. By breaking down program silos and embracing transversal solutions, we have amplified our impact. Initiatives like advocacy for people with disabilities protection, fair trade, skills training, Environmental education and Sustainable livelihoods for local communities, promoted food security and entrepreneurship while tackling inclusion, embody this shift. Through partnerships, we've scaled innovation, and fostered resilience.

This report celebrates the collective effort behind our achievements and the lives changed through your unwavering support.

As we step into the future, we carry forward the lessons of 2024; that true change begins when we listen, collaborate, and act with purpose.

Thank you for walking this path with us. Together, we are proving that community-driven solutions can turn challenges into opportunities for all.

Join us in continuing this mission by exploring how you can partner with us in 2025.

With gratitude,

Clide Odhiambo
Executive Director

How to sum up the year 2024 of Jitoleze Foundation?

2024 was a year of changes and transitions: We have established a new strategy. For the first time it is a 5-year strategy; it is far more transversal and based on community challenges: people with disabilities protection, fair trade, skills training, Environmental education and Sustainable livelihoods for local communities (Organic Household Supported Agriculture (Fresh, Local, Seasonal and Wholesome Food for Everyone))

The other main change lies in our focus on results. The whole strategy has been elaborated to better define the targeted impact and the associated indicators.

Which achievements are you most proud of?

I am proud of how this strategy has been put in place. We have broadly consulted our partners, our staff and volunteers in the field. It is a co-creation result and not just something from few individuals at office.

I am also very proud that we leave behind us program partition and integrate Career talks, mentorship, coaching and climate mitigation in all projects. We are now in a partnership logic and together face and address community challenges.

I also highlight our new partnership policy. We concluded 3 partnerships, 2 with public institutions and 1 private partner, allowing us to source expertise where it is, and to innovate by combining competences.

Furthermore, in 2024, we launched 4 new community programs and incorporated women and youth. These changes were necessary to address extreme poverty and emerging food security challenge.

Birungi Mary
Programs Manager

How does the role of Jitoleze evolve? At the Community level? With its partners? In the five-year strategy, Jitoleze Foundation positions as a resolutely local Community actor. The Busia Local Government aims to ensure better coordination between the various implementing CSOs. We have a role to play in the transfer of knowledge and in pooling resources at that level.

With the continuous poverty index, in mid 2024, Jitoleze pivoted to integrate climate change in all its programming; to share ideas and respond to emerging threats.

How is Jitoleze Foundation new partnership policy being organized?

We have three levels of partnership. The first one, which has hardly changed, regards partnerships with local government, education institutions, cultural and religious leadership. They are our principal partners; it is essential for us to maintain a really open relation with them.

The second level of partnership has much evolved. We must use public and private expertise as much as possible. Every project we implement involves a partner institution.

The third level of partnership ties us to our donors. We try to build a community surrounding Save Wildlife Uganda with local or international expertise. We want to be able to select our partners of choice, not of necessity with a view of maximizing the impact of future projects.
